DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND FRANCE NEARING BREAK

Soviet Paper Issues Warning In Case Of
White Guards

MOSCOW, Feb. 3.—Diplomatic relations between Soviet Russia and France are hanging in the balance, it was learned today.

Izvestia, semi-official government newspaper, issued a "warning" to France today,
declaring that normal diplomatic relations are "incompatible with provocative anti-Soviet acts with the aid of White guards."

This harsh tone is believed to be a result of the disappearance
in Paris of General Alexei Koutepoff, chief of the White Guard, composed of exiled officers of the former Russian imperial army.

Many Paris newspapers have openly accused the Soviets of kidnaping the general, and according to information here, sentiment in favor of the former czarist general and against the Soviets is running high in Paris.

The Izvestia's "warning" is considered as a word of advice to France not to be concerned over the whereabouts of General Koutepoff,
and not to express too much sympathy with the military elements which oppose the Soviet regime.

COMMISSIONER OF CANADA IS CALLED

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Peter Charles

America." He was president of the Salsola Tea Company of Toronto, Montreal, New York, Boston and Chicago.

He was regarded as one of the foremost philanthropists of Canada and said to have been the heaviest insured man in the dominion.

He was the first manufacturer to sell tea in sealed packages.

HIGH SCHOOL BOY KILLED IN HOLD-UP

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 3.—Patrolman Howard Ransom, of the Columbus police force, today had been absolved of all blame in the killing of Donald Kuhn, 17-year-old high school student.

Ransom shot and killed the youth as he and a companion were looting a local grocery store Saturday night.

Kuhn and Joe Weaver, 16, were found at the store by Ransom, who ordered them to raise their hands.

The officer fired at Kuhn when the youth disobeyed his command and reached down as though to grab a gun.

Weaver surrendered and is being held on a charge of robbery.

SOVIETS DRIVING OUT RICH PEASANTS

MOSCOW, Feb. 3.—A ruthless class war, sanctioned by the Soviet government and intended to result in all Kulaks (wealthy peasants)
being driven from Russia, was underway today.

For some time drastic measures designed to smash the Kulaks' resistance to the co-operative farm system instituted by the Stalin government have been widely practiced.

Now, however, the council of people's commissars has issued a decree empowering local authorities to "use all measures against Kulaks up to complete confiscation of their property and exiling them
from their home provinces."

Sabath.

1923 at Cincinnati after Donnelly was divorced by Mrs. Hazel Reba

1926.

former husband, John Everett O'
Connell, according to Goldblatt's

BANDITS BESTED IN TWO ATTEMPTS; TWO OTHERS MAKE GOOD

Would-Be Victims Snatch Guns From Rob-
bers.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 3.—Would-be holdup men met tarts in their vicinity over the week-end, according to police reports here today.
Two holdups were frustrated when the victims disarmed their assailants and beat them with their own revolvers. Two other alleged bandits were being held in the city prison for investigation.

Two men accosted A. L. Charfield, who disarmed them in the tussle,
one of the men gained possession of the revolver, but the arrival of Officer Lyons resulted in his arrest. The other man escaped but, following the confession of his companion. The men arrested gave their names as Thomas Moore, 19,
and Robert Jennings, 24, both negroes.

Two other robbers failed in their attempt to gather any loot, when they lined up four men, their hosts in a card game. Rogers, one of the men lined up, snatched the gun from one of the attackers. Both bandits fled and made their escape
in an auto.

Another pair of bandits made good. The men entered the cab of C. F. Sullivan, and after threatening him with a revolver, delivered him safely to his home. The cab was found later, near the scene of the robbery.

Another taxi-cab driver was relieved of his cash and auto, by a lone bandit.

PROHIBITION BILL FURNISHED GRIST; CONGRESS SEETHES

Fort's Brew Statement Involves Leaders On Both Sides

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The prohibition maelstrom seethed anew in congress today with interest divided between efforts to dry up society, to put federal officials to a "non-drinking" test, to legalize 2.75 beer, to encourage home-brew and to tighten enforcement of the eighteenth amendment.

The administration's bill, transferring the prohibition bureau to the department of justice, may be formally reported to the house during the day by Chairman Williamson (R) of S. D. of the house committee on executive expenditures.
He predicted its passage by the house probably Friday. At the last moment, the bill was amended to give Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon an equal voice with Attorney General William D.
Mitchell in the control of industrial alcohol permits.

The home brew controversy,
started by Representative Fort (R)
of N. J., close friend of President Hoover, threatened to involve every wet and dry leader in Washington.
No recent issue has so bewildered
the opposing forces. Fort, a dry, said citizens could drink light home-made beverages in their homes. Prohibition Commissioner James M. Moran, rather non-committal, said his dry agents would have difficulty in arresting anybody who did this. Other dries and a few wets said it was not unlawful. But most of the wets and some dries denounced it as an evasion.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Confident that the prohibition question will dominate congress for the present session, prominent wets today instituted a movement to bring in an address before the house of representatives at Washington, Congressman Franklin W. Fort, of New Jersey, above, close friend of President Hoover and a leading dry, has declared that the Volstead act does not bar the use of beer and light wines. For those who want it, make it and drink it at home, was his advice. He insists the eighteenth amendment must remain intact.

WOMAN GETS CREDIT FOR WAGING BATTLE UPON CORRUPTION

Trial In Oklahoma Climaxes Drive Against Crime

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Feb. 3.— Behind the startling and sordid record built up by government witnesses in the federal court hearing on the liquor conspiracy indictment against 102 present and former officials of Pottawatomie County, and alleged distillers and joint keepers in the Seminole oil field, is the story of an undaunted woman.

Mrs. Ethel Rennett, builder and owner of the Rennett Hotel at Earlsboro, may or may not be called to the stand—she is under subpoena—but public records indicate that the trial which entered its fifth day here today might fittingly be called the climax of her single-handed battle to clean up the oil boom towns.

A woman of considerable wealth,
Mrs. Rennett surprised the oil field first by living there; second by building an expensively furnished three-story hotel with a bath in every room, and finally by announcing that booze and women were "out."

Testifying in the impeachment trial of Henry S. Johnston, former governor, a year ago, she described how she had repeatedly called on the executive with detailed reports on vice conditions in the oil fields of the state. She modestly took credit for two state investigations, each of which precipitated resignations of oil field town officials but little more.

BETTER JAILERS IS PLEA OF NATIONAL CRIME COMMISSION

Probers Score Low Pay,
Politics In Naming
Guards

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Prison betterment workers today discussed the latest report of the national crime commission, just released, which stressed the importance of better jailers. The report was made by a committee on pardons of which Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, is chairman.

Any reform of penal administration will depend more on better guards than improved jails, the report said.

The committee has been seeking for five years the best measures to reduce crime in America and for the last year has studied prison
guards.

The committee reported the political spoils system so common in the naming of guards and several days ago it reached the conclusion most guards "are ignorant men, weaker mentally than the prisoner they watch."

The report also stated that despite the advance of the reform idea, imprisonment of 90 per cent of the adult prisoners in this country still means "confinement in durance vile."

Selection of guards by civil service was recommended.

KILLED BY AUTO
DAYTON, O., Feb. 3.—Carl
Eicher, 45, is dead at his home

DELEGATES TO ARMS CONFERENCE STILL STRUGGLE TO AGREE

French Compromise On Limitation Will Draw
Attack

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Entering upon their third week of conferences and discussions, the delegates to the London naval arms conference
today were still attempting to agree upon a suitable method of bringing about limitations of armaments.

All the delegations are now pledged to accept a compromise between limitation by categories or by global tonnage but the French compromise now before the conference stands little chance of being accepted as it stands.

The British in particular will insist at tomorrow's meeting of the committee of the whole that there should be considerable adjustment of the modified French proposals especially regarding their division of war vessels into more than six categories.

In addition, the nations preferring limitation by categories—the United States, Great Britain and Japan—will attempt to limit the percentage of transfers from one category to another to a negligible quantity while France will insist upon 25 per cent.

The British will further insist that there shall be no transfers between the three major categories,
battleships, eight inch gun cruiz-ers, and aircraft carriers, and are anxious to prevent transfers from surface vessel tonnage to submarine tonnage.

Until these questions are settled,
it will be difficult for the delegates to approach an agreement on figures of tonnage.

Today's program was confined to private meetings at which the various delegates compared notes on their written observations on the French compromise proposal which are to be submitted at the conference tomorrow.

While the other delegates probably will submit copious written observations, it is understood the American delegates have decided not to submit anything in writing for the meantime, preferring to await further clarification of the transactional proposal.

High Gibson, American ambassador to Switzerland, conferred at-length today with Rene Massigli, French minister of marine, regarding the compromise proposal. Preliminary MacDonald received Reijiro Wakatsuki, chief Japanese delegate, for a brief while this morning at 10 Downing Street, to discuss the present state of negotiations.
It is likely the transactional

SLAYS BEST FRIEND BECAUSE HE REFUSED TO JOIN ROBBERY PLOT

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 3.—Michael Tomio, 40, is being held by police here today for the alleged murder of his best friend, Angelo Rosso, 41.

The shooting occurred in Tomio's
home here last night, when he fired
all seven shots of a large-caliber revolver into Rosso's head and chest.

As Rosso's bullet-riddled body
lay on the floor of Tomio's home,
the alleged murderer went to the office of Dr. A. A. Peasley, his friend and family physician, and asked him to call police. He returned home and calmly awaited
the arrival of the officers.

Tomio gave himself up to police and told them that Rosso had objected to a contemplated robbery which he and eight other men had planned. The men were to go to West Virginia to rob bootleggers and jewelers. The venture was expected to net them about $12,000, 000, of which Tomio was to receive $8,000,000, he said.

The friendship of the two men started in Italy more than twenty years ago.

SEVERAL HURT WHEN DYNAMITE BLAST IS EXPLODED IN STORE

Worst Explosion In City
Felt Three Blocks
Away

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—A powerful dynamite bomb exploded here today, reducing the one-story fruit and vegetable store of Sam Madonia to a mass of twisted wreckage.

Several persons were injured by flying bits of glass and plaster.

The explosion spread terror throughout a large area of the west side, rousing sleeping families who hurried to the streets in fright.

Madonia's store and the stock it contained was completely obliterated.

Wreckage from the roof and walls and fruit and vegetables were hurled a block away; some of the flying debris smashed windows and tore off roofs.

A neighboring meat market and tailor shop were also wrecked.

What was left standing by the bomb was destroyed by flames which followed immediately.

Patrick J. Sherman, owner of the building, was blown from his bed and cut by flying glass. He was unable to give any reason for the place being bombed.

Others injured were Samuel
Tamia, Nicholas Arcure, his wife, Angela; Mrs. Anna Cici; two unidentified women and Policeman
Joseph Jelinek.

Windows were broken and plaster
cracked as far as three blocks from the scene of the blast. According to police it was one of the worst in Chicago's history, and authorities at first thought gas had caused the blast.

A watchman nearby told police
he saw an automobile speed away from the building a few minutes before the explosion.

charge of automobile stealing, confessed to the murder yesterday, police said. He also confessed stealing eighty automobiles in all parts of the country. He said that his conscience bothered him, and the thoughts of the murder preyed on his mind.

He claimed that he was hired to commit the murder by the proprietor of a roadhouse at Lexington.
Goggins was returned to Lexington from Marietta, Ga., for the theft of an automobile here, accord-

HOMES TENANTED BY DEAD, FLOOD FLYERS BELIEVE

Uncertainty as to the fate of hundreds of Posey county residents, isolated by southwestern Indiana flood waters, is expressed by relief workers in the area. Aviators flying low over many homes report they find no signs of life in many, where, just a day or two before, they were greeted by hand waving. They believe recession of the streams will reveal many dead in the homes. Photo shows one of the many sleds which are being dispatched from Vincennes, Ind., with provisions. In many instances the sleds have proven the only means of communication with the marooned victims.

RUSH RELIEF TO FARMERS MAROONED IN FLOOD AREA

These graphic photos taken in the flood regions of Arkansas and Indiana, show, left above, a relief tent near Big Lake, Ark.; upper right, flood victims being taken to relief headquarters on a hurriedly constructed barge when ice melted allowing rescue parties to penetrate the overflow district; below, a group of farmers in Knox county, Indiana, with sled loaded with food, meat and other provisions. They walked 10 miles to meet the Red Cross relief truck. At left of levee the Wabash river can be seen.

The Rev. Walter A. Miller, 26-year-old pastor of the Baptist Church at Corinth, N. Y., has consented to resign his post because he defended a boy who committed suicide after he had been suspended from school for drinking wine. The pastor said that the school authorities had not been justified in suspending the boy, 14-year-old Eugene Clothier. The deacons of the church disagreed with him and thought he had better resign as a result. About a year ago, they asked the young pastor to resign because he had danced with his fiancée.

Ace Doolittle Leaves Army for Shells

The Army Air Corps took a blow that hurt when Lieutenant James H. Doolittle, plane tester par excellence, announced his intention to leave the service for the employ of the Shell Union Oil Company. Noted for his daring feats in trying out all types of new planes, Lieutenant Doolittle on many occasions has narrowly escaped death.

Starting Term for 'Hex' Slaying

Ragged and childishly young, John Curry, 15, of York, Pa., seems to little realize the bleakness of his future as Sheriff Jonas H. Menges (right) brings him through the heavy iron door of the Eastern Penitentiary, behind which he will start his life term for the "hex" murder of Nelson D. Reymeyer, a York farmer. The crime was committed with two others, ostensibly to break the "witchlock" said to have been cast over them.

ESTIMATES PRICE FOR CORN
SILAGE

Although corn silage is one of the leading feeds for cattle of all kinds and is used to some extent for other kinds of livestock, it does not enter into commerce to a sufficient extent to have a recognized market price. Hence it often becomes necessary when silage is sold to resort to a comparison of its feeding value with that of other feeds whose current market value is more readily determined.

TALK ABOUT NERVE!

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—This is a lawsuit in which the second husband is trying to collect alimony from the first husband.

It was Harry Goldblatt, clothing salesman and husband number 2 of Mrs. Sadie Kaplan O'Connor Goldblatt who introduced this innovation in lawsuits.

Husband number one is John Everett O'Connell, broker and hotel owner, who was divorced in July, 1928. He agreed to pay $250,000 alimony at the rate of $200 a week and lump sums at intervals.

Goldblatt has brought suit for half of these payments. According to his bill, a prenuptial contract was signed to the effect that if he gave up his job as clothing salesman, Mrs. Goldblatt would give him half of her first husband's alimony payments.

GROUNDHOG, SUN
OUT BRIEFLY

THE groundhog showed co-operation with the ecclesiastical calendar Sunday when he predicted six weeks more of winter.

As Wednesday, the first day of Lent, does not occur this year until March 5 which makes Easter Sunday come April 20, considerably later than last year.

If the groundhog prognostication can be depended upon, winter should be well out of the way before the arrival of Easter, spring bonnets and violets, which is as it should be.

There was just enough sun Sunday to permit the groundhog to make his prophecy. Both the sun and the groundhog were only out for a few minutes and if the animal saw his shadow he had to be quick about it.

STREET MANNERS

A correspondent at the London conference cables to his paper in New York that at the royal audience accorded the delegates, a policeman held up the cars of the Japanese delegation while a nursemaid wheeled a baby carriage across the street. As the incident occurred west of Suez, we agree with the correspondent that it was "news," but if the situation had arisen in Japan, a reversal of the denouement would have been necessary to provide something to write home about.

Oriental and occidental street manners differ profoundly. The helpless and the encumbered are not ruthlessly run over in the Orient or crowded to the wall. The humbly person carrying a burden through the streets of Japan or China has the right of way over the most important unencumbered citizen. A coolie jogging through the crowded lanes of a Chinese city clears a way for himself and his load by chanting "chieh kuang, chieh kuang," a Diogenes plea to the crowd to stand from between him and the light. "Get out of the way" would be unnecessarily brusque, among a people intelligent and courteous enough to give priority to those who need it most.

American or European delegates might have chafed at being held up by a baby carriage. The Japanese delegates could hardly have been even surprised at what in their own country would have been a commonplace of traffic courtesy. They are atypical if they haven't a sense of humor; and their risibility must have been excited by the importance attached to the incident in countries that are at last beginning to learn how much the Orient can teach them about softening human contacts with sweet reasonableness.

SACK-CLOTH AND HAIR-SHIRTS

The allusion to mental hair-shirts in Mr. Hoover's now famous letter to the president emeritus of Ohio State university may have gone over the head of some of our readers. As an aside memoir, we offer the following interesting facts gleaned from an article by G. Cyprion Alston, an authority on early Christian history:

The cloth from which hair-shirts were made took its name from Cilicia, where it was woven, whence the Latin "cilicium" and the French "cilice." Scriptural sack-cloth, a symbol of mourning and penance, was probably of the same material. When Christianity was young and Christians were enthusiastic, wearing hair-cloth shirts was common among the ascetics, as a means of bodily mortification and an aid in resisting the temptations of the flesh. Ordinary laymen aped their religious betters. St. Jerome mentions the habit of the latter of wearing hair-shirts under their luxurious raiment as an antidote to ostentation. Cassian disapproved of hair-shirts for monks on the ground that, if worn outside, they savored of vanity; while if worn next to the flesh, they interfered with manual exercise. The religious orders of the Middle Ages continued, however, to use them in imitation of the early ascetics, aspirants to the perfect life. The fact that Charlemagne was buried in the hair-shirt he had worn in life shows that the laity still followed the practice. A few religious orders still wear hair-shirts. The habit of mortifying the flesh, among laymen, appears to have changed from the material out of which their raiment is made to the styles in which it is cut.

The use Mr. Hoover made of the hair-shirt in his letter was symbolic, when he mentioned the hair-shirts imposed upon his patience by his critics. The revival of Cilician undergarments for ordinary citizens probably would be opposed by the textile industry, already hard pressed by the competition of cotton substitutes; but what an excellent thing it would be for the average soul if it still wore under its silks and satins a scratchy reminder that all is vanity and that the grave is not its goal.

The snow on the ground in the city and the snow on the ground in the country seem to be two entirely different substances.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

MONEY AND HONOR

Mme. Curie, famous co-discoverer of radium, was asked why she had not taken out patents on various processes related to radium. She might have become immensely wealthy.

"The scientist," she replied, "abhors the very idea of making application for protection, much less taking out a patent."

She says the desire to get rich sterilizes the brains of research workers. Something wrong here. As great as Mme. Curie is, one can not agree that scientists should not become rich. Their riches, properly used, will finance them in further research. Their riches can build laboratories and advance the work of science by generations and centuries.

There is nothing wrong about being rich. There can be wealth without conflict with honor.

COMPROMISE

There are too many of us who are afraid of the word "compromise." We think of it as a weak word and think of ourselves as weak if we make use of the principle. Compromise, as a matter of fact, is one of the most important and desirable principles for the guidance of human affairs. Most of us need a great deal more of the spirit of compromise than we have. There are certain convictions which we all ought to stand for and which are worth defending to the last line. In most of our ideas and affairs we ought to be far more willing to give and take, live and let live, than we are. Only about ten per cent of the things that we think matter really do matter.

There would be fewer and better churches, fewer and better organizations—and much more human happiness—if we had the breadth and tolerance to change our minds, get off our high horses, admit we are "all wet" and compromise for the sake of agreement and peace.

TO HOLD US UP

Dr. Kidder, archeologist of Washington is right when he says we shall do well to study the causes of the decline of early civilization in the western hemisphere among the Mayas and Pueblo Indians. And we should study further the causes that led to the decline and fall of the ancient civilization of Greece and Rome. In this way we may hope to ward off decline in modern Europe and America.

Culture seems to have come and gone in cycles. Just because civilizations of the past have gone to pieces is no adequate reason why they must always follow the same course. If we can come to understand the real sources of weakness we may preserve ourselves.

Representative LaGuardia of New York maintains that the Eighteenth amendment should have been re-amended for ratification after seven years, which was not done; therefore that it is now invalid. Please illuminate.

Representative LaGuardia admits the Eighteenth amendment's ratification. However, section 3 of the amendment itself provides: "This article (amendment 18) shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified . . . within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the states by congress." No other amendment contains such a provision; hence LaGuardia's argument that a second ratification was necessary to complete its own requirements. Representative Moore, Virginia, answering in congress, recalled that the supreme court upheld the whole amendment in 1921. LaGuardia rejoined that the seven years had not then expired; whereupon Representative Wood, Indiana, made the point that, in any event, the question is one for the courts (not congress) to settle. Representative Snell, New York, as chairman, upheld Wood.

Installment Buying

Nationally speaking, in what way is installment buying economically desirable or otherwise?

On the one hand, it permits an income's recipient to enjoy what his income will buy while the income is in process of coming in, instead of being forced to wait until it has accumulated. On the other hand, if he is like some folk, he may be tempted to overwork his credit. Multiplied by about 120,000,000 population, we have the proposition on a national scale.

Little Danger

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—The breakfast nook in the average small New York apartment was conceived as an architectural apology to those who entertain a conservative prejudice against eating in the kitchen. They are now seeking further to dignify its status by calling it a "dining alcove."

"But," remarked the Duchess, dipping her Parker House roll into the ox-tail soup, "no matter how thin you slice it, it's still the other end of the kitchen!"

CAN'T CHANGE HIM

Here's the true story of why Harry Richman, of Broadway night club reputation (and Clara Bow's friend) didn't stay in Hollywood. "Look out!" cried Harry, "wagging to Barrymore, Ramon Novarro and the rest of the bunch. 'Hold fast; here I come!'"

The Hollywoodmen-of-the-World grabbed hold of the nearest rail and along came Harry, plus-fours, personality and all.

He went in for his first screen look. Not so good. He took another and after that a lot more. Finally came the verdict of the screen man to the Big Boss:

"It's no use. Chief. We've taken ten screen tests in all. We smeared his face with yellow paint, green paint, red paint, purple paint, but it's all the same. He still looks like Harry Richman!"

LONDON CONFERENCE

Stewart Agrees With Congressman

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—If Congressman Albert Johnson, of Washington, should be picked up at the entrance to a dark alley early one of these mornings, with his skull in and half a brick lying alongside him, the police will know right away who did it.

It will be any one of about 395 other members of the house of representatives.

Johnson was quoted recently to the effect that Speaker Longworth, Col. John Q. Tilson, Congressman Bertrand H. Snell and the members of the appropriations committee are the only representatives who have a blessed thing to say about legislation. The others' sole job, he added, is to correspond with their constituents.

This contemptuous estimate of their importance (or lack of any) seems to have penetrated to an unusual depth under congress skin somehow; the remarks one hears in Capitol Hill concerning Johnson would not look well in a great family newspaper.

Not in a long time have I listened to such a sputtering.

Omitting the Longworth-Tilson-Snell trio, the appropriations committee members, Johnson himself and John M. Robinson, who has just been promoted to the senate, around 395 lawmakers remain, therefore, who will be suspected in case the Washingtonian meets with foul play any time in the near future.

Indeed, it is not altogether certain that the Longworth-Tilson-Snell syndicate ought to be excused from the list of those on whose ears Representative Johnson's dying groans would fall as sweet music. Maybe Speaker Longworth ought to be; but not Snell and Tilson.

There is a good deal of the pomp of power about Nick Longworth. He not only likes to be a boss; he likes to be recognized as one.

Wise old Colonel Tilson and crafty Chairman Snell of the rules committee vastly prefer to do their dictating without making a bit of fuss about it. They realize perfectly that putting on airs is exactly the way to start an insurrection. By calling attention to them, Johnson probably fretted those too fully as much as he enraged the common herd by referring to them as of so little consequence. Possibly Speaker Longworth was tickled.

As usual when anyone generalizes very broadly, Representative Johnson, though he told the truth, did not tell quite all of it.

He did not exaggerate the Longworth-Tilson-Snell autocracy.

He was right in saying that the appropriations committee, which dishes out the government's money (largely in accordance with Longworth-Tilson-Snell suggestions), is congress' highest powered single committee.

Still, there are some other committees of considerable importance—at least their chairmen are important.

For instance, the ways and means committee, which plans methods of raising the money to be dish'd out subsequently by the appropriations committee, is almost, if not quite, as important as the latter.

The ways and means committee is in the limelight during the tax levying stage of the game. The appropriations committee has its innings when the moment arrives to decide how to spend the national bank roll.

Of course the appropriations committee is infinitely the more popular of the two.

When wasn't a good spender more popular than a bill collector?

William R. Green of Iowa used to be ways and means chairman. "Bill Green," observes Representative Rainey of Illinois, a Democratic committeeman, "honestly tried to be fair when they would let him; something had to be done about that." President Coolidge gave him a better-paid job in the court of claims. Willis C. Hawley of Oregon succeeded him. It was under Hawley's auspices that the committee framed the tariff bill that the senate has been fighting over ever since last April.

Martin B. Madden of Illinois was appropriations chairman until he died a couple of years ago, when his successor, Daniel R. Anthony, of Kansas, recently retired. Will R. Woods of Indiana took over the post and holds it yet.

Positively historic names!—every one of them.

More well-known names, too—Democrats' beside Republicans'—are scattered through the rosters of both committees.

Louis C. Cramton, the celebrated dry; George Holden Tinkham, the equally celebrated wet; Allen T. Treadway, high tariffite par excellence; Henry T. Rainey, low tariffite par excellence; Joseph W. Byrns and Cordell Hull, potential Tennessee senators; W. A. Ayres, mentioned in connection with the vice presidency at Houston; John N. Garner, the Democratic representatives' leader.

Those two committees are about on a footing as to influential members.

Also a few middling big men might be named who belong to neither oligarchy of the two—as Gilbert N. Haugen, agriculture committee chairman; Louis T. McFadden, banking and currency chairman; Francis W. James and Fred A. Britten, army and navy chairmen, respectively; George S. Graham, as judiciary chairman, in charge of all wet-and-dry bills; Franklin Fort, original Hoover "boy scout"; Longworth, Tilson and Snell, the "big three"; Albert Johnson himself, chairman of the immigration committee.

But in the main Johnson was right—375 to 380 representatives, anyway, are here simply to run errands for the home folks.

New Boudoir Luxury

A new accessory designed to increase the luxury of the boudoir or dressing room is the organdie drawer lining. It is made up in many lovely pastel tints that blend or contrast with milady's dainty undergarments. Not only does the lining cover the inner surface of the drawer, but it is long enough to fold back, thus serving as a dust cover. It is sturdy and practical, and if washed occasionally in suds, lukewarm water it will retain its usefulness indefinitely.

mentioned in connection with the vice presidency at Houston; John N. Garner, the Democratic representatives' leader.

Those two committees are about on a footing as to influential members.

Also a few middling big men might be named who belong to neither oligarchy of the two—as Gilbert N. Haugen, agriculture committee chairman; Louis T. McFadden, banking and currency chairman; Francis W. James and Fred A. Britten, army and navy chairmen, respectively; George S. Graham, as judiciary chairman, in charge of all wet-and-dry bills; Franklin Fort, original Hoover "boy scout"; Longworth, Tilson and Snell, the "big three"; Albert Johnson himself, chairman of the immigration committee.

But in the main Johnson was right—375 to 380 representatives, anyway, are here simply to run errands for the home folks.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

DRAGON WITH TWO THOUSAND EYES

Evidently Sir Dragon-Fly liked to hear himself talked about. No sooner had Peter remarked that his face looked all eyes, than Dragon-Fly dropped from the sky on a fern leaf close by Peter.

"You keep your eyes open, Boy. I'll say that much for you!" said he. "And if I know anything at all, you never let them deceive you. Of course my face seems all eyes. Why shouldn't it? It is. Do you know how many windows I have in my head?" Peter didn't. However, that was no reason for him saying nothing.

"I should say there were hundreds of eyes in your head," said he, then laughed at the idea. "But of course I must be mistaken. Maybe the light makes them appear more and larger." Sir Dragon-Fly snorted.

"Stuff and nonsense!" shrieked he. "Don't make me laugh. The light has nothing to do with it. You were right in the first place. Believe it or not, I have a thousand tiny eyes in each of my two great eyes. That makes two thousand eyes, if I know my multiplication table. You can be sure nothing ever escapes my sight," Peter gasped.

"I shall have to take your word for it, but really, I never heard of such a thing. Two thousand eyes! Why, I have but two, and yet I see perfectly. What's the big idea?" "Self-protection," declared Dragon-Fly, shortly. "I need every one of the two thousand to save me from my enemies. And you haven't heard anything yet. What would you say if I were to tell you that my cousins have forty thousand eyes all the better to see with? Of course they're regular giants, but even so, you'd scarcely expect anything like that, would you?" Peter was speechless, and Dragon-Fly changed the subject by asking a question.

"Do you know what the insects call me?" Dragon-Fly glared at Peter. Peter shook his head. Try to remember as he would, he simply couldn't.

"Sorry, Lady Bug mentioned it, but I've forgotten," said he, and held his breath. Perhaps Dragon-Fly wouldn't forgive his being so stupid.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Deep Breathing

MR. W., who conducts a health club, where systematic exercises suited to the individual are given, writes me that his experience coincides with that of Dr. Rappaport, who found that systematic deep breathing exercises were an aid to the reduction of high blood pressure. I'm glad to hear this. But how much of the lowering of the pressure is due to the increased breathing capacity, and how much to the loss of excess fat and to the improved diet, is debatable. At any rate, deep breathing exercises and other exercises which cause deep breathing are important aids to normal health, and are neglected by far too many.

When the respiration is shallow, the exchange of oxygen in the tissues, known as internal respiration is not great enough, and all the organs suffer from oxygen deprivation.

The only muscles that are exercised by the majority are arm and leg and jaw muscles, and not all arm and leg muscles—at that. The consequence is that there is a great deal of stagnation of the blood and tissue fluids, with its evil effects upon the organs, flabbiness of all the muscles and tissues, and, very frequently, deposition of excess fat. The tonic of the involuntary muscles (the heart, blood vessels and intestinal muscles, depend upon the tone of the voluntary muscles and if the voluntary muscles are neglected, they also suffer.

I'm afraid I haven't given sufficient emphasis in the column to the vigorous use of the muscles to help in keeping normal. The reason for all overweight is that more food is taken than exercise and other physical activities (internal and external) use up, and it is undoubtedly better in most cases to increase the exercises and use up some of the food excess, so the diet restriction does not have to be so great.

The money we spend to attend a good gymnasium is money well invested. Those who cannot do this should have 10 to 15 minutes of vigorous setting-up exercises every day (unless exercise is contra-indicated). We have a series called the Tummy Ten, which are helpful. Also an article on High Blood Pressure and a pamphlet on reducing. See column rules for obtaining these.

MRS. L.—I hold with the scientific authorities, who, after careful investigations, have found that there is not enough aluminum in cooking utensils to be of any harm at all.

According to the investigation, aluminum is present in a number of foods, even though they have been cooked in aluminum vessels. Aluminum salts are given medicinally for certain diseases. To say that the increase in cancer is due to the increased use of aluminum is an absurd reasoning. We much better say that the increase in cancer is due to an increased consumption of devaluated food and the consequent unbalanced diet and to the increased use of laundries, elevators, automobiles, and all other machinery. For an unbalanced diet certainly disturbs the chemistry of the body, and lack of exercise permits stasis or slowing down of the circulation of the blood, lymph (tissue fluids), and both these factors are present in cancer patients.

I think you will be very foolish to throw away your aluminum cooking utensils, Mrs. L.

We have an article on Baked Diet which is very helpful. See column rules for obtaining this.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

HOW can a child with talent and temperament be brought up to develop her greatest possibilities? Don't try to "bring her up," say I. Let her develop.

Part of the "temperament" is merely adolescence. She'll outgrow it. Opportunity to develop her talent should be found, and there is always—perhaps I had better say almost always—a way to do that. Although I incline more and more to the theory I expounded while young, that if you want to do anything badly enough you do it.

Parents get blamed for about everything these days. They are too strict or too lax. They give the kids too much liberty or none at all, until if Old Mother Nature wasn't a powerful lawyer, no one would dare to be a parent.

My only theory is that if parents are pretty decent themselves, keep close to the youngsters, love 'em hard and give them a chance to get some hard knocks as well as pleasant experiences, and to get away from home and paddle their own canoe fairly early, the majority turn out wonderfully well—with fewer complexes and suppressed desires than their parents and a fairly broad and tolerant outlook on life.

MAY NEY: Glad you "kicked the harness." Few of us have the courage. And about the race—you know. Don't you mean "ratiocination"? Just to show you how smart I am, says I to myself, when I looked at that word. "She has spelled it wrong." And maybe I have a little bite—or bit, eh what?

As to the diaries confided to teachers or friends. Don't you think when diaries are offered for friends—or enemies—to read, it is because the writers of them think they are a bit too good to be left in obscurity? Generally speaking, that is. And about that solitary confinement—I get my meals served me, and plenty of books to read. Looks good to me.

Now, are we friends?

MADAME X: Better let him and accept other invitations, if no use trying to hold these off when they get snooty. Sometimes when one else wakes up, and, in any case, it only makes more heartache to keep on together.

DIXIE: I think the boy in love loves you, judging from his adoration. Don't worry about the letter. He surely wouldn't have given you a diamond ring and wanted to meet his parents if he didn't love you. Maybe he was a little before, or not quite sure of himself or something.

BROKEN HEARTED SWEET: Yes, invite the boy to your party. And try to be a little bit bit sixteen is not so old but that can wait awhile to have boyfriends. Maybe your mother is not well that makes her irritable.

NINA JEAN: Why not try to along with the boy friend instead of quarreling and telling him hate him? That is, if you love as you say you do. Don't let what you can do about your mother and sister "picking on you" as you suggest, bear it patting. Get through school, and in a time you'll be able to live your life.

SEEKER OF HAPPINESS: LOVE: My dear girl, I should think you would have too pride to run after a young man who shows so little interest in you. Forget him.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Everyone recognizes the aging skin at once. It betrays the signs of age—lines, wrinkles, relaxed contours, sagging muscles. Actually, it shows neglect, more than age, for time alone does not bring these marks to a skin. It is primarily improper treatment, or lack of care, that causes them.

Poor circulation is the chief fault. When the blood does not circulate freely through the tissues, the skin lacks the refreshing and nourishing properties that it needs to work well. Lines grow deeper and muscles sag because the tissues are not revitalized. And the normal of this, "Keep your blood coursing through your veins at a youthful rate."

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

Roy Smith, center, and Donald Allen, forward, although both are juniors, played their last basketball game for Cedarville College this season in the game with Antioch College Saturday night. Both are voluntarily leaving college at once and will return to their homes. There is a possibility, however, Allen and possibly Smith will return to Cedarville next year to finish out their college careers.

The loss of these two outstanding athletes will seriously cripple the "Yellow-Jackets" in basketball throughout the remainder of the season, but one consolation is that the schedule is almost completed. Smith and Allen came to Cedarville from Belle Center, O., where they played together on the school teams. But Allen's home is now in Detroit, Mich.

Each is a three-letter man and each has played basketball, football and baseball at Cedarville for the last three seasons. Smith has been the regular pivot-man on the court teams since the latter part of his freshman year and Allen became a regular in his sophomore year.

They are two of the most outstanding athletes ever developed at Cedarville and both will be sadly missed.

John Hurley, Xenia Central's center, although the Bucks did not play a league game last week, is still setting the pace for the high individual scoring in the Miami Valley League with twenty-eight points.

Two league games were played last Friday and when the barrage of field goals and foul throws died down it was discovered that R. Weaver, of Miami, and Hoover, of Xenia, had tied Birch Hall, Xenia forward, for runner-up position to Hurley. All three players have accumulated twenty-five points.

The high-scoring team for the league now includes Bell, Xenia, and Hoover, Troy, forwards; Hurley, center; and R. Weaver and C. Weaver, Miami, guards.

Miamisburg and Troy have each played four games, however, while the other four teams have played but three each and inasmuch as Xenia and Piqua will again meet non-league opponents this week while the remaining four teams swing back into action, it is likely that Hurley will fall from his present high estate and the personnel of the high scoring list, will undergo radical changes.

Nine league players have scored twenty points or more in league games. Here they are:

Player	Team	Pts.
Hurley	Xenia	28
Bell	Xenia	25
R. Weaver	Miamisburg	25
Hoover	Troy	25
Kritzer	Sidney	23
Schreiber	Miamisburg	22
Kaser	Sidney	21
C. Weaver	Miamisburg	21
May	Troy	20

Because they look so much alike it is almost impossible to guard them in the excitement of the game, the Barrett twins, forwards on Miami's basketball team, are getting away with first degree murder, their opponents claim. Either two guards are on one of the twins or neither is guarded. It is said that in the recent Miami-Denison Bob Barrett's guard twice was troubling his brother and each time Bob took advantage of the mistake to score.

Former Cincinnati High School players who were rivals in their prep school days now largely compose Cincinnati's fast-stepping basketball team. Woodward High in Cincinnati gave to the Bearcats Bill Berwanger and Johnny Seegars while Ellis Flax, Bill Gervers and Bill Popp played on the Hughes High School team in that city. The fact that four of these boys are now included among the ten high scorers of the Buckeye Conference is quite a tribute to basketball as played by Cincinnati high schools. It has long been known that Cincinnati schools, meek in football, are terrible to mock in the basketball court.

'FORCE GIRLS WIN FROM LOCKLAND IN OPENING CONTEST

Wilberforce Girls Easily Outclass Visitors

Wilberforce University girls' quintet won the opening game of the girls' basketball season Friday night in Beacom Gym by swamping the "Y. W." team from Lockland, 21-7.

The visitors were outclassed by every combination Miss Hall, girls physical director, sent against them.

David was high pointer for Wilberforce, making three baskets and one free throw; Graham and Roseberry made a basket each for Lockland and Baker dropped one and a free throw.

In the preliminary game the H-Y team of Dayton defeated the Wilberforce H-Y team 27-25 in a fast overtime game.

CEDARVILLE LOSES TO ANTIOCH OUTFIT IN SURPRISE GAME

Winners Hold Lead Throughout; Final For Division B

Antioch College's Division B basketball team wound up its cage schedule by scoring its third straight victory, a surprisingly easy 28 to 23 triumph over its traditional foe, Cedarville College, Saturday night at Yellow Springs.

Led by Wilcox, forward, who sank five baskets and two free throws for twelve points, Antioch obtained an early lead and never relinquished it.

Neither team did much shooting in the first half, which ended in Antioch's favor, 11 to 4, but the "Yellow-Jackets" made a strong comeback in the second semester and came within three points of evening the count. With Antioch's advantage reduced to 21 to 18, Fisher shot a foul and then added a fielder to give his team a margin.

McLinn then entered the game and celebrated his entry by recording two baskets, thereby sewing up the contest for Antioch. Playing his last game of the current season, because he is leaving school immediately, Roy Smith, star Cedarville center, topped his team's attack with nine points, but was watched closely by Antioch's freshman pivot man, Donald Allen also played his last game for the Boristmen and scored three points.

Basketball will mark time at Antioch until February 15 when the Division "A" quintet takes up the schedule and meets Defiance at Yellow Springs on that date. This division will also play Wilmington at Wilmington, February 20 and will close its season with an invasion of Indiana, meeting Hanover February 25 and Earlham, February 26. The lineup:

CENTRAL WILL HOLD MIAMI VALLEY LOOP LEAGUE THIS WEEK

Buccaneers Have No Games Book'd For This Week

Xenia Central still "sitting on top of the world" in the basketball chase in the Miami Valley League and will continue to occupy the topmost rung of the league ladder for another week at least as the Bucks are not scheduled to play a league game this week.

Miamisburg fell victim to an astonishing upset last week when it dropped an overtime decision to Troy, and the Bucks now have only a mathematical chance to tie for the league title. Piqua, as a result, is in second place all by itself and the Burgers and Troy are tied for third position.

With Xenia and Piqua still idle, the remaining four league teams will fight it out this week for lower places in the standing.

Miamisburg and Troy will wind up their league schedules, and Troy visiting Greenville.

It is a curious fact that Piqua, which has won two games and lost only one, has scored sixteen less points than opposing teams in three league games. Figures also show that Sidney, which has lost three league games and has not won a game, has scored only nine less points than opposing quintets, having lost each league tilt by close margins.

Standing of the league teams, together with the points scored by and against each team follows:

Team	Won.	Lost.	Pct.	G. P.
Xenia	3	0	1.000	78 62
Piqua	2	1	.667	63 75
Troy	2	2	.500	96 109
Miamisburg	2	2	.500	108 80
Greenville	1	2	.333	59 69
Sidney	0	3	.000	67 76

Sidney was nosed out by Bradford High, 19 to 18 in a nip and tuck struggle on the Sidney floor, while Piqua bowed to Dayton Fairview, 19 to 12 in a close guarding game at Piqua.

Leading at the half 13 to 8, Miamisburg, however, defeated Franklin without difficulty, 23 to 16 on the Burger floor.

FOR THE LOVE O'PAT BY C.L.WEBB © 1929

READ THIS FIRST: Lieutenant Rex Dallard and Dr. Frank Gordon, both in love with Patricia Blair, heiress and Red Cross driver, have joined forces in an attempt to frustrate a plot to rob the girl and her twin brother, Jimmy, of their fortune. At New York City, just after the close of the World War, Herbert Maxwell, guardian of the twins, is preparing to play his trump card in his effort to seize at least a part of the Blair fortune. Jimmy, a victim of aphasia, is being held secretly by Maxwell, who plans the introduction of a fake brother when the settlement of the estate is made. Patricia, hoping to checkmate him, has requested that her family doctor be present in order to identify Jimmy through an operation scar and the fact that his heart is on the right side.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

As the friends of Pat and herself were taking their departure a woman of forty, or thereabouts, in the garb of a graduate nurse, entered the room, gave a quick, anxious look toward Maxwell's companion and then crossed over to him, taking him by the arm with the solicitous care of one deeply interested in his welfare. Margery, glancing back, saw her put her wrist as if she were telling him not to mind, everything was all right now that she was there. It was a trifling incident, but it clung in Margery's memory for hours, refusing to be dislodged. The time came when she understood its meaning.

"Oh, that fox of a Maxwell!" burst from Pat the instant they were all seated in Margery's big car, the lawyer having left them to go to his office. "What a liar! And just to think that Dad gave a man like him guardianship over Jimmy and me!"

"He's a clever rascal, no doubt of that!" agreed Rex Dallard, a worried frown wrinkling his broad forehead. He was recalling in his mind's eye a picture of the executor's complacent countenance at the moment he announced his willingness to have the transfer dated postponed. Would the man be bold enough, Rex wondered, to try and force his game through in the face of Pat's plan?

"I am possessed with the feeling—intuition, maybe it is—that he will find some way to spoil my beautiful scheme," continued Pat in a manner pensively thoughtful. "Still, I can't imagine how he could," she added quickly and turned to Dr. Gordon for another confirmation of the plan's soundness. "It wouldn't be within the bounds of reason, would it, Frank?" she asked anxiously, "that this tool of his could have had his appendix cut out and his heart be on the right side, too?"

And Dr. Gordon, out of the goodness of his heart and his love for her, tendered her his most reassuring smile. "Not one chance in a million!" "On the right side," corrected phasis. "Your brother and yourself are the first cases I ever heard of, personally, who wore their hearts to the right of the wishbone."

"Perhaps that's why Pat's heart has never yet been pierced by Cupid's dart!" hazarded Margery. "It's on the wrong side!" "—On the right side," corrected the owner, "Jimmy's, too!" Upon their return to the Lynne home Pat found a telegram awaiting her, an answer to her four hundred word message to Dr. Gardner in Cleveland. The doctor, so the telegram stated, would arrive at the Pennsylvania station, New York City, at six o'clock on the evening of January 7, bringing with him the records requested. The entire message contained thirteen words, Pat put it away as a souvenir, after kissing it in token of good luck. Two weeks afterward she drew it up and burned it as a hoodoo of ill-luck.

Dr. Gardner was met at the station upon his arrival in New York by the Lynne chauffeur and driven in Margery's limousine to the Lynne home in Brooklyn. Here he again met Pat after a seven year interval, together with her friends, at dinner. She had told him a small part of her trouble in the four hundred word message. Now she told him the whole strange story. At its conclusion his rugged countenance wore a worried look. "Poor Jimmy," he commented sadly. "He was a fine, healthy lad. As for being able to identify him—why, I'd know the boy if I met him in Timbuku—that is, if I saw that stomach of his there, we cut him open, the scar had the look of a Maltese cross, owing to a slight infection and the way it healed! But to think that old Maxwell is trying to run in a fake deal like this, ringing in a phony brother on you! He must be crazy—gone money-mad!" "Chance has done the most to boost his game!" declared Rex Dallard. "That crashing of the plane with the fellow that looks like Jimmy Blair and then Pat and the doctor here finding the letters and things on him! It was Pat calling him her brother that has been Maxwell's strongest card!"

"He will find some way to spoil my beautiful scheme."

"Well, he'll need stronger cards than that to enable him to put over any of his dirty schemes on my little girl while I'm on the job!" proclaimed the oldest friend of "his little girl." "I know Herbert Maxwell and I've heard that he's a very wise old fox. He has fooled a lot of people, maybe, but he's never fooled Doc Gardner and he never will!"

The day was to come when Dr. Gardner had to admit that even he had been fooled. For ways that were strange, he acknowledged, and for tricks that were the trickiest, he was quite convinced, he said, that he must hand the palm to Maxwell. But that which old Doc Gardner handed Maxwell was something more than a palm.

At Dr. Gardner's suggestion it was decided by Pat and the others to stage their "grand expose" in the office of a New York friend of the doctor, a well-known physician who possessed an X-ray machine of the latest model. In response to the Cleveland doctor's request on the morning set for the postponed transfer proceedings, the friend placed his machine at the other's disposal for use between the hours of 10:30 and 11:30.

With this arrangement completed Pat and her coterie of friends, comprising two doctors, a lawyer, a soldier and a nurse, started for the place of meeting in the trust company building. They were on their way, as the "oldest living friend" of Pat expressed it, "to make Maxwell dust his tail for the tail timber!" "There is a saying, however, so we've heard, that 'He laughs best who laughs last.'"

The first part of their meeting that morning with Herbert Maxwell and his protegee was much the same as that on the one previous occasion. The only difference was in the presence of the woman in the nurse's uniform. They had seen her enter the directors' room as they departed the week before. Now she seemed to be in charge of the young man.

At first sight of the latter Dr. Gardner gave a little start and made a motion as if to speak. Then he caught himself, glanced at Maxwell, nodded, and looked again at the young man. His actions plainly indicated that he was half inclined to think his friends had made a mistake—that this young man was Jimmy Blair, after all. At that moment the lawyer, Marks, spoke.

"You were told on the occasion of our meeting here a week ago today," he began, addressing Maxwell and Grierson jointly, "that on this date Miss Blair would substantiate her statements made then. This gentleman—" indicating the visiting physician—"is Dr. Gardner, of Cleveland. He has in his possession the records of two operations he helped perform at Cleveland ten years ago, one patient being this young woman, Miss Patricia Blair, and the other her twin brother, James K. Blair. These operations, performed six months apart, were both for appendicitis. The remarkable features connected with the operations were that in each instance it was discovered that the patient's heart was located on the right hand side, instead of on the left side, as with the average person. "The test, of proof, as promised by Miss Blair in her statement made a week ago was now offered to furnish by means of the X-ray. Dr. Gardner, we propose, will conduct an X-ray examination of this young man whom Maxwell alleges to be James K. Blair, twin brother of Patricia Blair."

"If it is found upon examination by Dr. Gardner and the doctor Mr. Grierson has brought here as witness, that this young man's appendix is still intact and that his heart is in the usual location then Miss Blair's contention shall stand proved beyond any further controversy. If, on the other hand, the young man's appendix is gone and his heart is found to be on the right hand side that shall be considered evidence that he is James K. Blair, brother of my client, as alleged by Mr. Maxwell!"

PROHIBITION MILL FURNISHED GRIST; CONGRESS SEETHES

about a bi-partisan leadership over their scattered ranks. Having suffered because the wet forces have been an army with more generals than privates, the wets who see their first chance in years to make inroads on the drys are insistent upon an air-tight organization.

The senate wets are virtually leaderless since Senator Bruce of Maryland and Edwards (D) of New Jersey were defeated and Senator Edge (R) of New Jersey became ambassador to Paris. Senator John J. Blaine (R) of Wisconsin is rapidly being recognized as the unofficial spokesman for the senate-prohibitionists, with Senator Millard Tydings (D) of Maryland and Senator David I. Walsh (D) of Massachusetts the most militant of the Democrats.

A fight for leadership of the house wets was temporarily settled when Representative Linthicum (D) of Maryland was re-elected chairman of the "wet bloc" and Representative James Beck (R) of Pennsylvania was named chairman of its executive committee.

Rep. Byer (R) of Missouri has emerged as the director of the wets fight for 275 per cent beer, while Representative Luardia (R) of New York, Schaefer (R) of Wisconsin and Black (D) of New York have carried the brunt of floor battles.

Many house wets have picked Representative Beck as their potential spokesman. A former solicitor-general and a noted constitutional authority, he is recognized as the premier orator of the house. The wets are looking forward to his promised speech next Friday.

Representative Firovich (D) of New York, a physician, seized the leadership of the movement to ban poisoned alcohol, and is expected to be supported by the "wet bloc."

The Theater

The way to write a successful play is not to write it until it is ready to be written," says Martin Flavin, whose amazing success in putting three hits on Broadway in one season was the subject of comment in this column recently. Flavin was born in San Francisco, but is now a resident of Carmel, Cal., and is now a resident of Carmel, Cal., and is now a resident of Carmel, Cal.

The actual writing of a play takes me only six weeks, sometimes, or a month," says Flavin. "I write nothing until I know it is going to take place. My Philip Prugh, Harold Messenger and Charles Read are home from Denison for a brief vacation. Hivling Stokes, who is on the varsity cage team, went to Oberlin to play a game Friday night and will not come home until Saturday. Herbert and Karl Babb, also Denison students, will spend their vacation at Delaware.

The Johnson-Ketchel prize fight picture at the Orpheum Theater attracted two large audiences. Miss Alma Babb, Xenia, sophomore at Ohio Wesleyan University, has been chosen one of the two maids-of-honor for Co. D at the annual military reception at the school. Plans for the Y. M. C. On the other hand, he must become intimately acquainted with them. Dialogue still is hardly up to standard. Frequently it is written with narrative and description when it should be charged dramatic action."

Flavin started to be a newspaperman in Chicago, and then went into business for some years. His first big success was years ago: "The Children of

CAESARCREEK FARM INSTITUTE IS WELL ATTENDED IS SAID

An average of 200 people attended the Caesar Creek Farmers' Institute at the high school Thursday and Friday, January 30-31. Special speakers throughout the four sessions included Mrs. Mary Field Hendrix of Clarksville, who spoke interestingly to her audiences, offering practical and useful suggestions to the folks living in rural communities.

C. C. Terrell, New Vienna, gave helpful suggestions on crops and livestock problems that are at present confronting the farmer. The opening session of the institute featured a forty-five minute concert by a thirty-piece symphony orchestra of Wilmington under the direction of C. E. Toops.

Readings, music and other entertainment added greatly to the success of the program which was furnished by Alonzo Carle, Emory Oglesbee, Dennis and Roger Pagett, Mrs. E. D. Haines, Mrs. Charles Lewis, Mrs. J. B. Mason, Mrs. Eva Oglesbee, Earl Babb and the high school orchestra and chorus under the direction of Miss Correll, music director.

A cake, candy and corn show was an attractive feature of the institute. Prize winners of the corn show were Joseph Smith, who won first prize given for the best ten ears of yellow corn, consisting of a flashlight given by the Huston-Bickett Hardware Co.; second prize was won by E. D. Haines which consisted of a flashlight given by the Famous Auto Supply Co.

Prize winners on the best ten ears of mixed corn were Oscar Jones, who won first prize of a focusing flashlight given by Wayne Smith and second prize of five pounds of cup grease to E. D. Haines.

Mrs. Luther Hartsook was winner of first prize on butter cake, the prize being twenty-five pounds of flour given by the Xenia Farmers' Exchange and Mrs. Calvin Van Tress won second prize of a pyrex baking dish given by the Greene County Hardware Co.

Premiums on candy were awarded to Mrs. E. D. Haines, who won first prize on fondant, consisting of three pounds of coffee given by M. A. Ross grocery, and to Mrs. Luther Hartsook, who received first prize on fudge, consisting of six cans assorted I. G. A. products given by H. M. Smith of Paintersville.

The following officers were elected to serve for 1930: E. D. Haines, president; Mrs. R. K. Haines, secretary and Mrs. D. B. Pagett, corresponding secretary.

THINK YOUTHS HELD IN HAMILTON BROKE INTO GROCERY HERE

Two youths, Arthur Peffley, 19, and Eldon Flora, 20, both of Hamilton, O., being held by police at Hamilton in connection with a series of robberies in Hamilton, Cincinnati and other cities in Ohio and eastern Indiana, are reported to have confessed to burglarizing a general store in Xenia.

On the theory that the boys may have been responsible for the robbery of the R. W. Howland grocery on S. Monroe St., last January 24 in which groceries valued at $50 were stolen, Police Chief M. E. Graham has written Hamilton authorities for complete details of the arrests.

The two boys are said to have confessed that, aided by a third companion, whose name is unknown, they obtained loot valued at more than $1,000. Police arrested the pair Friday night with the assistance of two Liberty, Ind. merchants, who identified Peffley and Flora as the boys who had held up and robbed them in their stores.

Police are seeking a third member of the alleged bandit gang throughout southwestern Ohio and Indiana.

LIBRARY RECEIVES DONATION OF BOOKS

The Wilberforce University Carnegie Library has received the addition of twenty-five volumes through the donation of Mrs. M. E. Maxwell, Xenia. Mrs. Maxwell is the widow of the former consul-general.

This is the second private donation the library has received lately, the entire collection of five thousand volumes of President Emeritus W. S. Scarborough, as well as manuscripts of several books, having been given to the institution by his widow at the beginning of the school year.

PLEADS GUILTY TO CHICKEN STEALING

Arraigned before Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Monday morning on a charge of breaking into a hen house on the farm of John Rhodes, a neighbor, in the daytime, Guy Wilson, 40, living on the Kemp Road in Beaver Creek Twp., pleaded guilty and was bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 bond.

Wilson was arrested Saturday night by Deputy Sheriff George Sugden and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, and confessed, authorities say, to stealing eight Plymouth Rock chickens from his neighbor about noon Saturday.

An investigation made by deputies of the sheriff's office disclosed that the chickens had been lifted out of the hen house through a window, from which fabric designed to provide ventilation, had been torn away.

AUTOISTS HURT AS MACHINES COLLIDE

Two sedans overturned and were badly damaged but their occupants escaped with minor abrasions in an accident on the Cincinnati Pike near the Xenia corporation limits at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The wheels of an auto driven by J. W. Snook, 2921 Kenmore Ave., Belmont, a suburb of Dayton, and also occupied by his wife and his parents, became wedged in a rut on the side of the highway as Snook attempted to pass another sedan driven by Stewart Coward, Jamestown, Colored. Snook's car swung in front of Coward's machine, resulting in a collision which upset both autos.

Coward's car, which was also occupied by his wife, landed in a ditch. Both sedans were being driven toward Xenia.

All occupants received no more serious injuries than minor cuts and bruises, according to Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, who investigated the accident.
